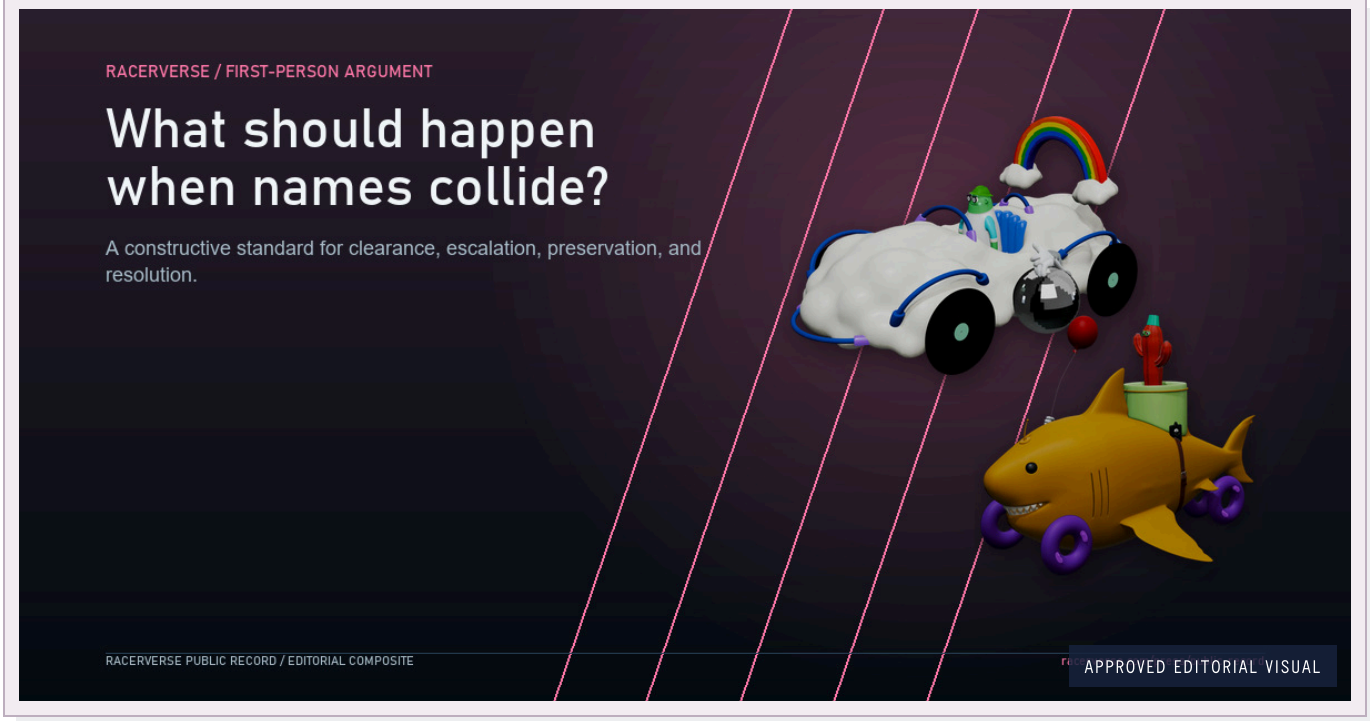
A constructive first-person standard for naming collisions

An opinion proposal about what large companies should do when a planned brand collides with an earlier small-company identity.



STORY ANGLE

The record supports a policy discussion about responses to earlier small-company use.

Lucky Machines' position and founder experience are attributed advocacy. The underlying factual record links primary sources, identifies disputed issues, provides Mattel's public statements, and does not present allegations as findings.

QUICK READ

What the record shows

1. The argument can ask for meaningful clearance, escalation, documented response, and proportionate resolution practices.
2. The underlying dates and statements can be sourced without claiming the Board has endorsed Lucky Machines' position.
3. Personal impact should remain first-person testimony unless independently corroborated.
