

TWO COLLECTOR HISTORIES, KEPT DISTINCT

A collector-facing guide to product taxonomy, release chronology, digital provenance, and why the two ecosystems should not be conflated.

STORY ANGLE

TWO DISTINCT COLLECTOR HISTORIES NOW APPEAR UNDER THE SAME CORE TERM.
A product taxonomy identifies each system's format, release, channel, and date. Those primary records support comparison without relying on image similarity or treating the two systems as identical.

QUICK READ

WHAT THE RECORD SHOWS

- 1. Lucky Machines' record concerns browser-native Original Racers, Mint Keys, and identified digital transactions.
- 2. Mattel filed HOT WHEELS SUPERSTAR SPEEDERS in June 2025; later listings document another licensed character-driver line with related scale, formats, track play, and retail channels.
- 3. The two systems are not presented as identical; the live dispute concerns the contested name and Lucky Machines' asserted trademark position. The Board's September 17, 2026 schedule reset remains procedural: expert disclosures are due October 13, discovery closes November 12, and plaintiff's pretrial disclosures are due December 27.
